Dear Mr. Scott,

I am writing because I purchased a carton of your Egg-cellect Eggs at a local grocery store on March 6, 2014. I opened up the carton, cracked a couple of eggs, and noticed that there was a significant blood spot from one of the eggs. I was extremely disappointed when I saw the blood spot. I have purchased this brand of eggs for years, and I expected better from your company.

Unfortunately, I did not consume the eggs. I felt horrible for wasting those eggs, but they were clearly inedible due to the blood spot. I do hope that your company will take better care when examining the eggs.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

Dwight Schrute
